The Barber-Shop Fly.
From the Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph.
There's a peaky little creature,
And just now it's quite a feature In a place where hissing morals often stop, Every minute changing lodging.
Every minute wild shape doubling—It's the fly that looms around the barber shop.
Yes, there's trouble every minute,
And the fly is strictly in it.
When you get so nicely seated for a shave,
For the insect, gray and risky, Will do anything that's risky Just to make you wince and twitch and squirm and cry.
While the barber's busy with his clippers, Round your head that fly is hopping.
Next your ear it gently tickles with its toes;
But of course you do not like it.
And you raise a hand to strike it.
Then the fly is calmly squatting on your nose.
Just a minute, fierce and scappy.
And again you feel your hair being cut.
Till it finds that polished bald spot on your head:
Then you simply get furious.
Fit for anything but a barber shop.
And you feel inclined to raise particular Ned.
Then the barber, in a hurry, Tries to make the insect scurry.
But upon your chin he loses the razor drop;
You ignore his explanation,
And, in heavy indignation, Make a vow you'll never again go to that shop.
But will go to A. H. Austin's shop, Safford.

separated them. They were strung out in the form of a crescent, the heavy fighting ships in the center, the flagship on the right and the Massachusetts on the left flank.
The line remained stationary throughout the bombardment. The Vixen and Scorpion took up positions on opposite flanks close inshore for the purpose of enfilading any infantry that might fire upon the ships.

When the ships got into position it was still too dark for any firing. The admiral signaled the ships not to fire until the muzzles of the enemy's guns in the em-bassures could be seen by the gun captains.

New York Opens the Ball.
Fifteen minutes later, at 5:25 a. m., the New York opened with a broadside from her main battery at the works on the east of the entrance to the harbor. All the ships followed in streaks of flame. The fleet, enveloped in smoke, pelted the hills and kicked up dirt and masonry. It was a magnificent spectacle from where the Dauntless lay.

Though the gun captains had been cautioned not to waste ammunition, but to fire with deliberation, the fire was so rapid that there was an almost continuous report. The measured crash of the big 13-inch guns of the battleships sounded above the rattle of the guns of the secondary batteries like thunder claps above the din of a hurricane. A strong land breeze off the shore carried the smoke of the ships seaward while it let down a thick curtain in front of the Spanish gunners.

Our fire was much more effective than in preceding bombardments.
The admiral's ordnance expert had given explicit directions to reduce the powder charges and to elevate the guns so as to secure a plunging fire. As the shells in the preceding bombardments dropped with the almost impossible straight trajectories of projectiles with full charges, it was almost impossible to plant them. They would shoot into the air, encircling the batteries, owing to the high elevation, and fall far over the fortifications.
The effect of the reduced charges was marvelous.

Making Short Work of It.
In fifteen minutes the western hole in the emplacement with a thousand pound projectile, and the Texas dropped a shell into their powder magazine. The explosion wrought terrible havoc. The frame was lifted, the sides were blown out, and a shower of debris flew in every direction. One timber, carried out of the side of the battery, went tumbling down the hill.
The loss of life must have been great.

The batteries on the east of Morro were harder to get at, but the New Orleans crossed the bows of New York to within 1500 yards off shore and played a tattoo with her long eight-inch rifles, hitting them repeatedly, striking a gun square muzzle on, lifting it off its trun-nions and sending it sweeping somersaults in the air.

The present supreme court of Arizona is making the best record of any bench since the organization of the territory. It has disposed of every case on the docket and has handed down written opinions in every case before it save two, which are now in course of preparation. This is certainly a great credit mark for our supreme court. During the last twenty-five years it has been the practice of court to carry many of the cases on appeal over from term to term and when a decision was rendered seldom give the reasons therefor, but simply reversed or sustained the decision of the lower court without handing down a written opinion, without passing upon the contested points before it and thus making precedents for the judiciary and bar of the territory.—

Cowboys all over Arizona are spending their spare moments with the ropes, practicing in some quiet corner behind the brush for the usual tournaments which constitute part of the program of Arizona Fourth of July celebrations. Liberal prizes are generally offered, and frequently some good roping records are made. It can also be truthfully stated that frequently those most familiar with such exercises make dismal failures when attempting to make a grand-stand play before a multitude of people. The sport is all right, however, and participated in with much pleasure by the boys.—Stockman.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failpronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment.
